JESUS FILM TRANSLATION STATUS

2006 Global Status of Evangelical Christianity

EVANGELICAL CHRISTIANITY (cont. map)
Source: The map is based on 10,000+ mission agency reports, surveys and other data gathered from the field. The size of each colored dot representing each population point is based on the population of the city. The color of each dot represents the primary language spoken within each city, and the regional status of that people group derived from the CPTI database maintained by the Global Research Department of the International Mission Board, SBC.

HISTORICAL RESPONSE MAP - JESUS FILM MEDIA (cont. map)
Each dot is represented by a colored dot where size is scaled according to its population and color-coded by the status of Bible translation for the primary language spoken in that city.

Each dot is represented by a colored dot where size is scaled according to its population and color-coded by the status of JESUS Film translation based on the primary language spoken in that city.

Two possible ways of using all the maps together:
• Focus on the Red Areas: Within the main map, dots that indicate cities, towns and villages where there is no known Evangelical Christian church or materials. Based on the center map map to get a sense of the response or response to the Gospel in these areas (and know "high response"). Then view the status of Bible translation and JESUS Film (left and right maps). When all maps are used in a particular place, this indicates a great need for Bible translation, evangelism and follow-up church planting, discipleship training, and other Christian materials, all of which are in high response to the Gospel (Matthew 28:18-20).

• Focus on the Green Areas: The green areas on all three maps would indicate that the Gospel message is widely available in multiple languages and that there is a large number of Evangelical Christians in the area. These areas, response to a high percentage of the Gospel may be low, and other types of evangelism (e.g., social service, etc.) may be more effective (1 Thessalonians 5:14).

There is an ongoing need in both of these areas for saturation church planting. "In church within any corner of every person," and the material discipline where the response is "To know love, and joyful faith, and to be used of Him to reach up qualified laborers, as qualified members, as far as possible, to help build the Great Commission." (Colossians 1:28-29)
